

DENIC eG input to the IGF stocktaking consultation

DENIC appreciates the opportunity to participate in the stocktaking process for the 13th IGF and would like to offer the following suggestions.

- Dialogue benefits from both diversity in perspective as well as diversity in opinion. Therefore, we would encourage the MAG to cluster proposals around a smaller number of high level issues and to invite session proposers to jointly prepare sessions. This would help participants by limiting potential scheduling conflicts in the overall program as well as prevent fragmentation of the discussion sphere.
- In addition, we would like to suggest the MAG be even more vigilant about assigning sessions to "ready-mix" proposals.
- In general, while panels should have their place, we would encourage more interaction, both among the prepared participants as well as the wider range of attendees.
- With an ever increasing complexity and the successful growth of the meeting, there is enough "terra incognita" for everybody to explore. Assigning selected time and easily accessible space to introductory or overview sessions, repeated during the week and highly interactive, would foster the dialogue across stakeholder groups.
