

Background Paper of Personal Information Protection Issue

In recent years, the personal information disclosure incidents of large multinational Internet companies have caused continuous concern in the international community. Issues such as illegal collection of personal information, data disclosure or abuse, and illegal cross-border transfer have not only infringed on the legitimate rights and interests of individuals, but also brought serious threats to the economic interests of enterprises, and even the economic and social stability of the country. Countries around the world have adopted legislation and strengthen international cooperation to further strengthen the protection of personal information. Sharing the successful experiences and practices among countries in personal information protection will help us to build consensus and promote international cooperation.